CHARLES A. KLENKE WILL GET $2500

Supreme Court Upholds the Lower Court in a Decision for Damages Against Short Line.

In an opinion handed down in the Supreme court yesterday in the case of Charles A. Klenke, Jr., vs. the Oregon Short Line Railroad company, appellant, the judgment of the lower court is affirmed, with costs. The action is one wherein the plaintiff claimed damages for $7500 for injuries alleged to have been received while being put off from a moving train. The lower court rendered a verdict in the plaintiff's favor for $2500. The opinion is written by Chief Justice Baskin and concurred in by his associates.

Another opinion, written by Justice Bartch, was handed down in the case of M. C. Moon, appellant, vs. Salt Lake county and the Oregon Short Line Railroad company. In this action, brought to quiet title to a piece of real estate, the Supreme court affirms the judgment of the trial court as relates to the railroad company, but reverses the judgment as between the appellant and Salt Lake county and orders that judg-ment be entered in favor of the plain-tiff. Chief Justice Baskin and Justice McCarty concur in the findings.

SCHOOL CONTEST

IN MILL CREEK

Unbounded enthusiasm was the feature of a school meet held at Mill Creek Friday, in which the contesting factions were the pupils of the Mill Creek school, district 30, and the Sugar school, district 29. The pupils from dis-trict 30 won the history test with an average of 82, and they also captured the victory in the spelling match, with an average of 71. The Sugar district won out in the arithmetic contest. The boys from 29 also cleaned up the No. 30 pupils in the athletic events, taking overything with the single exception of the inlie race. There was a large turn-out of parents from both districts, and the contest was the most successful from every standpoint ever held be-tween any of the district schools.
